What makes more sense!

Application stage

With your own hassles of life and little or no knowledge about the complex rules and regulation governing the admission process, and then immigration and settlement processes, you may lose your way initially, and you can be misguided or misinformed by someone with outdated or no information at all. Without knowing what documents are required in the process and how to find the most suitable college/university in the respective countries which are approved by the government of those countries, can lead you and your child in to a catch twenty two situation, where firstly you can lose your hard earned money and secondly, your child's quality education dream is lost –Without a quality education base –the post education phase is going to be tough i.e. getting good jobs, getting good salaries, getting settled worldwide and get ahead in life- it all makes a vicious circle for you and your dreams remain- dreams, they never become a reality- We hope you understand the consequences of going towards wrong direction at this stage. If you still feel you can take this process in a right manner on your own – We wish you all the success in the world!

Visa documentation and Interview preparation stage

After going through the application process professionally- more important phase comes into the picture which is to prepare your child's case for 100% visa success, your child must have the visa to enter into the country of destination- e.g. -Canadian education visa success ratio is just 39% from India as compared to our success ratio of 99% for Canada and other countries - because we take selective cases. Other countries are also very selective in providing visas and due to non- professional filing and mistakes and sometimes due to fake and unapproved college or university the visa success ratio are less, there are many more areas which are covered by the visa officer before issuing the visa to the candidate. This is again a very crucial step which requires preparation on many fronts including language skills and knowledge of your profession in the country you aspire to study. Unprepared candidate will never be confident. Each country has specific aspects that they scrutinize during the interview as well documentation stages. The methodology and the questioning technique also vary. Lack of knowledge is a big drawback and can prove to be a serious handicap to a potential candidate. Once the visa is rejected in one country the chances of rejections increase in other countries and this will lead to a vicious circle of visa rejections. If your child doesn't get a visa, he cannot go to further education abroad, and your dream is lost again-as well as money of initial tests and application and other charges till this phase.

Pre-departure stages

Each minute detail needs attention and coordination. Essential items and kit required at the college, details of clothing and other Do's and Don'ts are an important part of the information pool. A student would need details on insurance and medical cover, banking facilities, money exchange, airline tickets, global credit cards, global phone card or global phone and sim from India only, so that you are connected with him and have his comfort level information availability 24x7x365. Our support team leaves no stone unturned to ensure that a student's transition from home country to a foreign land is absolutely hassle free and he is made aware of almost 90% of the facts, laws, culture and documents and other legal precautions to be taken upfront- which will help him to adjust in the new culture as soon as he lands there.

Post landing

Under post landing services aspects like airport transport, prior booking of accommodation, its type and location for your immediate period of stay on landing and coordinating related issues are looked into. All this needs careful and advance planning to prevent any last minute glitches, so that your child is landed safely and is in comfortable transition from his home country to his destination country. These services are catered with the co-ordination of our support team and university representative at the destination country

Why- International Education

In an era of videoconferencing and virtual meetings, distance is no longer a barrier to do business. But succeeding internationally means more than getting hold of people overseas. You must have a global mindset – a blend of experience, attitude and understanding of other cultures.

As business becomes more international, senior-level executives need experience that matches the global ambitions of their companies. Experts report that without international exposure, executives aren't in the running for senior-level positions with world-class companies. "For first- and second-level management assignments it's almost impossible to get those jobs without international experience," says Reinhold Thiele, leader of the European Industrial practice. As companies horizons have expanded, so have the ways in which you can gain significant international exposure at senior executive level. Achieving results in an unfamiliar setting gives your leadership skills a great workout, showing you can operate effectively in new and stressful situations. "It shows that you can adapt business models and ways of working to different scenarios,"

Education Abroad

The globalization of the business world has created a growth in the demand for high level of skills in both, the existing and new areas of economy. Many of the well paying MNC's in the country recruit students with international degrees, and as a result students who graduate from Foreign Universities and Colleges, enjoy a successful and prosperous career throughout their lives. Globalization has resulted not only in the exchange of products but also in the exchange of skilled manpower and India is highly ranked and respected in the world community for its brainy and English speaking human capital. These facts are creating a very high demand for internationally exposed young generation which can be adjusted in the best economies without any cultural or language barriers.

Demand for international education highest in India

The number of Indian students going abroad for studies has increased almost three times in the last few years and the trend for obtaining foreign education is on a high with the increasing number of students going to Canada, USA, UK, Australia & New Zealand and other parts of the world.

In the year 2007, more than 1,00,000 students from India applied for student Visas. In fact, in a few years from now, if you have plans to study abroad, don't expect to find American or Australian classmates, as Indians are set to dominate the global education scenario. Indian students are expected to constitute around 50% of the total student population, opting for foreign education in the approaching decade. Global demand for higher education is set to grow and Asia is expected to remain the hottest destination for international education, with India being the key driver for the growth student immigration some of the best economies in the world would have aging population and they prefer international students to take up these upcoming jobs in those economies and enjoy the rich life styles of the west.
